7. Taxation in Denmark

The following is an overview of certain Danish income tax considerations relating to the Securities.

The overview is for general information only and does not purport to constitute exhaustive tax or legal advice. It is specifically noted that the overview does not address all possible tax consequences relating to the Securities. The overview is based solely upon the tax laws of Denmark in effect on the date of this Base Prospectus. Danish tax laws may be subject to change, possibly with retroactive effect.

The overview does not cover investors to whom special tax rules apply, and, therefore, may not be relevant, for example, to investors subject to the Danish Tax on Pension Yields Act (i.e. pension savings), certain institutional investors, insurance companies, pension companies, banks, stockbrokers and investors with tax liability on return on pension investments. The overview does not cover taxation of individuals and companies who carry on a business of purchasing and selling Securities. The overview only sets out the tax position of the direct owners of the Securities and further assumes that the direct investors are the beneficial owners of the Securities and any interest thereon. Sales are assumed to be sales to a third party (i.e. sales to a non-affiliated party) and any redemption is assumed to be on arm's length terms. Furthermore, it is assumed that the issuer of the Securities is not affiliated with any of the investors and that the Securities qualify as debt instruments for Danish tax purposes.

With regards to the withholding tax considerations below, these are only relevant insofar that the issuer of the Securities is a Danish tax resident, or the issuer carries out the business to which the Securities relates through a permanent establishment in Denmark.

Additionally, investors residing outside Denmark are assumed not to have a permanent establishment in Denmark.

Investors are advised to consult their tax advisors regarding the applicable tax consequences of the acquiring, holding and disposing of the Securities based on their particular circumstances.

Tax considerations relating to the Securities

The following includes an overview of certain Danish tax considerations relating to the Securities. The overview is subject to the general reservations outlined above.

Taxation of Danish tax resident investors

Individual investors

Sale or redemption of Securities

Gains from the sale or redemption of Securities are calculated as the difference between the purchase price and the sales price. In 2018, any gains are taxed as capital income at a rate up to 42 per cent. The tax rate is subject to adjustments based on all income generated in Denmark, excluding income generated from shares (i.e. capital gains and dividends derived by shares), which is subject to a separate taxation scheme.

If the net capital gains from Securities does not exceed DKK 2,000 in a giving year, then said capital income will be tax exempt.

Losses on the Securities can be used to off-set capital income in the same income year, but can generally not be carried forward.

Losses on Securities admitted to trading on a regulated market can only be offset against other capital income, if notification of the loss has been sent to the Danish tax authorities before the filing of the tax return for the relevant income year.

In the event of an investors death, the estate may be handled in one of two ways (i) the surviving spouse may choose to succeed in the tax position of the deceased, thus resulting in ongoing taxation (as outlined above) as if the spouse had acquired the Securities at the time and at the value of the deceased, or (ii) alternatively, the estate may be settled in which case the allotment of the estate will trigger inheritance tax.

If the estate is settled, all heirs will be subject to an inheritance tax based on their family relationship to the deceased, i.e. spouse, children and grandchildren are subject to a 15 per cent. taxation of all inheritance exceeding DKK 289,000 (2018), while other family relations (or non-related persons) are subject to an inheritance tax of 36.25 per cent. of their entire inheritance.

Interest on Securities

Interest on Securities is subject to Danish capital income taxation equivalent to gains on Securities (as set out above). However, interest is not in scope for the DKK 2.000 threshold applicable for capital gains and thus always taxable irrespective of the amount.

Interest is taxed in the income year in which it is due to payment. Consequently, accrued interest is generally taxed in the income year it becomes payable.

Corporate investors

Sale or redemption of Securities

Capital gains from Securities are taxable as corporate income at a rate of 22 per cent. irrespective of ownership period. Losses on such Securities are fully deductible.

Capital gains or losses on securities are taxed based on a mark-to-marked principle. According to the mark-to-market principle, each year's taxable gain or loss is calculated as the difference between the market value of the Securities at the beginning and end of the tax year. Thus, taxation will take place on an accrual basis even if no Securities have been disposed of and no gains or losses have been realised. If the Securities are sold or otherwise disposed of before the end of the income year, the taxable income of that income year equals the difference between the value of the Securities at the beginning of the income year and the realisation sum. If any Securities are acquired and realised in the same income year, the taxable income equals the difference between the acquisition sum and the realisation sum. If the Securities are acquired in the income year and not realised in the same income year, the taxable income equals the difference between the acquisition sum and the value of the shares at the end of the income years.

Losses on Securities can be used to off-set any corporate income and can be carried forward indefinitely. However, certain restrictions apply to the use of tax losses from previous years, if the losses utilized from previous years exceed DKK 8,205,000 (2018).

Interest on Securities

Interest on Securities is subject to Danish taxation as corporate income (at a tax rate of 22 per cent.) and is generally taxed in the income year the interest relates to, i.e. accrued interest will be taxable in the income year in which it accrues.

Taxation of investors residing outside Denmark

Individual investors

Sale or redemption of Securities

Investors not resident in Denmark are normally not subject to Danish taxation on any gains realised on the sale or redemption of Securities, irrespective of the ownership period.

Interest on Securities

Interest on Securities is generally exempt from any Danish withholding tax.

Corporate investors

Sale or redemption of Securities

Corporate investors not resident in Denmark are normally not subject to Danish taxation on any gains realised on the sale or redemption of Securities, irrespective of the ownership period, this is, however, subject to certain anti-avoidance rules that will not be described in further detail.

Interest on Securities

Interest on Securities are generally exempt from Danish withholding tax. However, Danish withholding tax may be levied on certain interest payment between affiliated parties.

Securities transfer tax and stamp duties

No Danish share transfer tax or stamp duties are payable on transfer of Securities.

8. Taxation in Finland

The following is a brief overview of certain Finnish tax consequences of the acquisition, ownership and the sale, assignment or redemption of Securities. It does not purport to be a comprehensive description of all tax considerations, which may be relevant to a decision to purchase Securities, and, in particular, does not consider any specific facts or circumstances that may apply to a particular purchaser. The following information is based on the laws of Finland currently in force and as applied on the date of this Base Prospectus, which are subject to change, possibly with retrospective effect.

With regard to certain specific types of Securities, it is not always totally clear how such Securities type will be treated for tax purposes. It should also be noted that the tax authorities may change their view and that the tax courts are not bound by guidance provided by tax authorities. Even if court decisions exist with regard to certain types of Securities, it is not certain that the same reasoning will apply to the Securities due to specific features of such Securities.

As each issue of Securities may be subject to a different tax treatment, due to the specific terms of such issue of Securities, the following information only provides generic information on the expected tax treatment. The following information only describes the tax treatment of Securities in general and certain particularities with respect to individual types of Securities. Further, the following information does not provide for information with respect to the tax treatment of any underlying Share(s) (as defined in this Base Prospectus) received upon a physical delivery under the Securities unless otherwise explicitly referred to.

Prospective purchasers of Securities are advised to consult their own tax advisors as to the tax consequences of the acquisition, ownership and the sale, assignment or redemption of Securities, including the effect of any state or local taxes, under the tax laws of Finland and each country of which they are residents or may otherwise be liable to tax. Only these advisers will be able to take into account appropriately the details relevant to the taxation of the respective holders of the Securities.

General considerations

The tax treatment of the Securities depends on the nature of the particular security in question. Generally Securities considered as derivative financial instruments (e.g. warrants), where the value of the security is linked to the value of the underlying instrument, are treated differently from the Securities that represent debt instruments.

Where the Securities are issued in a currency other than Euro, the sale, assignment or redemption price and the acquisition costs have to be converted into Euro on the basis of the foreign exchange rates prevailing on the acquisition date and the sale, assignment or redemption date respectively.

Finnish resident individuals

Capital income, irrespective of the nature of the capital income (interest, capital gain or capital income) is taxed at a rate of 30 per cent. and to the extent the annual capital income exceeds

EUR 30,000 the tax rate is 34 per cent. However, interest income subject to Finnish withholding tax regime is taxed at a rate of 30 per cent. irrespective of the amount.

Interest payments

Under Finnish law, interest income received by Finnish tax resident individuals under the Securities and the index compensation paid in connection with redemption of capital guaranteed Securities are subject to Finnish capital income tax under Finnish Income Tax Act (1535/1992, as amended), provided that the issuer is a foreign resident and the Securities are not issued by issuer's permanent establishment in Finland. Income received from the sale or redemption of certain Securities (such as zero coupon bonds) is generally considered as interest income and taxed accordingly.

In case the issuer is not resident in Finland for tax purposes, the issuer is not obligated to withhold any tax. However, an agent or intermediary resident in Finland shall withhold advance income tax from any interest, interest compensation or index compensation, paid to an individual, where such payment is made through the agent or intermediary in Finland.

If the Securities are disposed, repaid or redeemed during the loan period, any capital gain as well as accrued interest received (i.e. secondary market compensation) is taxed as capital income.

Any profits on Securities that are regarded as warrants or certificates are generally considered as capital gain. Consequently, any payments made in respect of Securities that are regarded as warrants or certificates may be made without withholding Finnish tax and should not be subject to any preliminary taxation by a Finnish Paying Agent.

Capital gains

Capital gains realized on the sale or redemption of the Securities are subject to Finnish capital income tax.

Taxable capital gains and losses are calculated as the difference between the sales or exercise price and the aggregate of the actual acquisition cost of the Securities and the sales or exercise related expenses. Capital losses are deductible from capital gains and other capital income in the same year. Any remaining unused capital losses can be carried forward for five subsequent calendar years.

The acquisition cost presumption of 20 per cent. or 40 per cent. can be applied instead of the real acquisition cost. If the acquisition cost presumption is applied instead of the actual acquisition cost, any sales or exercise related expenses cannot be additionally deducted.

If the aggregate value of all taxable disposals of the individual does not exceed EUR 1,000 during the calendar year, the capital gain is tax exempt. Respectively the capital loss is non-tax deductible, provided that the aggregate acquisition costs do not exceed EUR 1,000.

Capital gains are not subject to tax withholding in Finland, and the taxes due are payable by the Finnish resident individual personally.

Capital income

Finnish tax laws do not include any specific provisions on taxation of derivative instruments such as warrants and certificates. Generally capital gains from the sale or exercise of listed Securities, or Securities that could be listed, are subject to taxation in Finland as capital gains. However, restrictions with respect to the claiming of losses generally apply if certain types of Securities, such as warrants and certificates expire worthless or almost worthless.

Gains from the sale or exercise of non-listed Securities which do not qualify for capital gains taxation are taxable as general capital income of the Finnish tax resident individual (i.e. not as capital gains). Consequently, losses arising from the sale or exercise as well as from expiry of non-listed Securities which do not qualify for capital gains are generally non-tax deductible.

Finnish resident corporate entities

Interest paid on the Securities to Finnish corporate entities and income arising from the disposal, repayment or redemption of the Securities are subject to final taxation of the recipient corporation either in accordance with the Finnish Business Income Tax Act (360/1968, as amended) or the Finnish Income Tax Act, depending on to which source of income the Securities belong. As of the date of this Base Prospectus the corporate income tax rate in Finland is 20 per cent.

Interest payments are generally taxable income to corporate entities and subject to final taxation as corporate income in accordance with the Finnish Business Income Tax Act or the Finnish Income Tax Act.

Income received from disposal, repayment or redemption of Securities, as well as secondary market compensation is taxable income, and the acquisition cost is in generally treated as a deductible expense.

The deductibility of capital losses depends on whether they are taxed under the Finnish Business Income Tax Act or the Finnish Income Tax Act. Capital losses taxable under the Finnish Business Income Tax Act are generally deductible from a company's income taxed under the Finnish Business Income Tax Act in the same tax year and the ten subsequent tax years, whereas capital losses taxable under the Finnish Income Tax Act are only deductible from capital gains taxed under the Finnish Income Tax Act on the year of the sale and during five subsequent years.

Companies may not use an acquisition cost presumption.

Transfer taxation

Generally the transfer of domestic securities that are not trading on a regulated market is subject to transfer tax.

As the Securities in question should not classify as Finnish securities, transfer of these Securities should not be subject to Finnish transfer taxation.
